Anova Earns ‘Best of Year’ Award from USA Today’s Reviewed.com for Anova Precision Cooker WI-FI

Reviewed.com Selects the Anova Precision Cooker WI-FI as Best Cooking Gadget of 2016

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 16, 2016 -- Anova, the leader in smart kitchen appliances, today announced that the Anova Precision Cooker WI-FI, has received the “2016 Best of Year Award” by USA TODAY’s Reviewed.com. Each year, Reviewed.com’s experts spend thousands of hours comprehensively lab testing more than 700 products to provide its expansive audience with unbiased, trustworthy reviews. Recognized as Reviewed.com’s best immersion circulator, the Anova Precision Cooker WI-FI has now been selected by the organization’s team of experts as “Best Cooking Gadget of the Year.”

“It’s an honor to receive this distinguished award from such a highly regarded organization,” said Stephen Svajian, CEO and co-founder of Anova. “We focus on providing accessible, quality devices at an affordable price point, so this award is incredible validation. We’re truly grateful for our customers as well. They have played an integral role in developing cooking technology that’s approachable and easy to use.”

Best Cooking Gadget of the Year: Anova Precision Cooker WI-FI

The award-winning Anova Precision Cooker WI-FI is a connected sous vide cooking device that enables the home cook to achieve restaurant-quality results with the touch of a button. The Anova Precision Cooker WI-FI connects to a user’s smartphone to make it easy to cook sous vide, a cooking technique once reserved for high-end restaurants and chefs around the world. Sous vide involves bringing food to a precisely controlled temperature to deliver tender, flavor-packed results from edge to edge, every time.

“The Anova Precision Cooker WI-FI boasts everything we could want from an immersion circulator,” said Staff Writer Kori Perten of Reviewed.com. “Anova isn’t just our top performer; it’s also the best value you’ll find.”
